Answer Key to Supplemental Admissions Questionnaire

Why do we provide answers to the supplemental questionnaire? Prospective parents receive the questions and answers ahead of time because the goal is to provide information that will help them understand Providence Classical Christian School better. Each question deals with real-life situations experienced by students, parents, and teachers in classical Christian schools. When you read these answers, which reflect the School's philosophy, you may wholeheartedly agree, or you may agree with qualifications or you may not agree at all. If there are areas of difference, you have a couple of choices. First, you may decide your priorities for your child are such that another school can better support your expectations. Second, you may decide the differences are minor and that keeping with the School's philosophy of education and practices will be a benefit for your child. The Lord God (Duet. 6:4-9, Eph. 6:4) requires parents to be active leaders in the education of their children; however, re-structuring of the School's programs and curriculum to accommodate individual preferences isn't something we can do. Constructive discussion and ideas are always welcome, especially when they are in keeping with the School's philosophy and Mission. We are eager to answer any questions you may have which will help you make a good decision.

1. A great school needs the active participation of parents. Everyone has skills or knowledge which contribute to advancing the School's Mission. We count on the active participation of parents at all levels.
2. Embracing each and every aspect of the curriculum, policies and practices may be challenging. A parent may love the reading curriculum, but they may not see the need for Latin or the dress code. Program and curricular decisions have been made with great care. We continually evaluate the effectiveness of materials we are using and the curricular expectations. However, no aspect of the curricular is optional except as detailed in the two-diploma tracks for graduation. School policies and programs should be willingly accepted. A lack of acceptance by parents will likely influence a child and may be reflected in his work and attitude at school.
3. Answers to this question will vary from family to family and child to child. We would like to get an idea of what values are important to your family.
4. Conflicts should be resolved at the lowest level possible, in accordance with Matthew 18. If you have a problem with a teacher, the headmaster, a board member, or other parents, you must first meet with the person involved, and if an agreement cannot be reached, both parties should then approach the next level of authority. Gossiping with others about a problem causes strife and isn't healthy for the school community.
5. Wise parents will not contribute to modern society's worship of success by paying too much attention to the outward marks of achievement/grades. Our goal is for every student to do his best, to work up to his potential in every area. All students have strengths and weaknesses. The purpose of grades is to communicate to teachers, parents, and students the level of mastery a student has acquired.
6. One of our greatest strengths is academic excellence. Our curriculum goals require much effort from every student. Parents of students who must work harder to keep up with the academic demands may need to limit extracurricular activities. Academics are a priority and while we want each student to make use of the opportunities for extracurricular activities, academics are a priority.
7. We have set certain guidelines for homework. We base these guidelines on what we have come to believe are reasonable, necessary amounts for most students. We also value family time, and we will do all we can to respect it. If your student uses the time given in class to work, normally he will have a manageable amount of homework.
8. Students transferring to and from PCCS often find that excellent grades are harder to earn here. A "C" demonstrates satisfactory achievement at PCCS, but it may also represent excellent effort by a student.
9. Our teachers do their best to give all students the attention they require. However, that attention is distributed among the entire class. Students with needs that require an excessive amount of attention from teachers may be better suited for another academic environment. PCCS has a conservative budget and limited resources, and we do not have the resources to provide special programs and services for students with exceptional needs.
